“ Camilo was a blessing in the lives of my family. He became my brother. Everyone who met him liked him. He would talk to anyone and harm nothing. There was a tree beginning to grow next to the sidewalk just feet from the door entrance to his home. It was growing next to the concrete and its tiny branches were beginning to reach to the side of the home. I told him that he better cut that tree down before it damaged the home. His response was that God put that tree there and that he wanted to respect its life.

There is so much I've learned from him on how we should treat others. He's gone way too soon but at least his pain and struggle are over. We'll miss you, man!
