“ Daddy,

We've always been told this grieving process would get easier. It's been almost a year since you "went fishing". Sometimes it seems like you were just throwing your arms around me and telling me how much you loved me. My heart is still breaking. It breaks a little more each day. I miss you so much. I know how selfish I may sound but I want you here with me again. One day again you will be able to throw your arms around me and tell me how much you love me, and one day we will get to go fishing together. I miss you so much. I love you Daddy.
